

5 questions

What to look for in a professional organizing service

By Christy Breithaupt

Special to The Detroit News

Thinking about getting organized? Beverly A. Rogers, president of Roseville-based Organizing to be Effective, says there are five Questions you should ask before hiring a professional organizer:

- How many years of professional organizing experience do you have?
- What areas of organization do you specialize in?
- How are your services priced - by the hour or by the project?
- Can you furnish client references and letters of recommendation?
- What is your method for helping a disorganized person gain a moderate level of control over clutter?